

MIRROR'S IMPORTANCE IN INTERIOR DESIGN

There are numerous issues with a space that can be concealed or even remedied by strategically placing mirrors. They offer instant flair and appeal while enhancing natural light and maximising the impression of openness in your house. Functionally, a mirror can be used to reflect natural light and provide an impression of space. Small rooms, for example, are typically difficult and can be rather annoying. In this situation, positioning is essential when decorating with mirrors, since it may make a low ceiling appear higher and a small room feel larger.

Not only can a mirror create the appearance of space, but it may also be used to distribute natural light. Due to the fact that mirrors reflect light, strategic use of mirrors can simulate sunlight and brighten an excessively dim room.

It is particularly good for tiny living and dining rooms if the homeowners are attempting to boost natural light and create a more balanced atmosphere. By placing a mirror exactly opposite a window in a room, you can increase the amount of sunshine that is reflected into the room.

In addition to space and lighting effects, mirrors are also frequently displayed as works of art or added to existing galleries on walls. You can use attractive mirror frames as wall art, in the same manner, you would use other decorative pieces or think about a gallery wall layout.

You may create a stunning outdoor haven with a tropical atmosphere that will transport you to a faraway land by using the reflection of your outdoor mirror to effectively double the number of plants you have. It is an absolute necessity for backyard gardens of any size, but the landscape of bigger gardens would benefit greatly from the mirrors' addition. Since mirrors represent the Water Element, even a modest fountain can create the illusion of more water that flows. According to Feng Shui, water that flows smoothly indicates the expansion of wealth and prosperity.

In contrast to how a large painting or photograph would dominate a space, a large mirror can make a room feel larger as long as the frames are not restrictive. For certain rooms, designing with mirrors will be simple.

Their style and arrangement will appear natural and generate a more appealing and aesthetically pleasing display. For example, if you hang a large ornamental mirror above the fireplace, it will always appear quite attractive and according to Feng Shui theory, this aesthetically pleasing approach can be used to fill a place with positive energy. The same effect can be for the small gardens. The use of mirrors as ornamentation in your garden is a wonderful way to appreciate the natural splendour that surrounds you.

By Cristina Gore, Market Research Associate

www.yellowkiosk.co.uk

July, 2022